In the past, the first umbrellas were used to provide shade from the sun, not the rain. No one knows who invented them. The Chinese probably made this invention over 4,000 years ago. People also saw umbrellas in the arts of ancient Egypt and Greece. At that time, they were for kings and rich people. In Europe, men didn't use umbrellas at first. Only women carried them. People used tree leaves or animal skins to make umbrellas. Now they use cloth to make them. In the eighteenth century, people started to use the umbrella on rainy days. Today they are popular and everyone has an umbrella.

Bees make honey. They live in hives. A hive has only one queen, many worker bees and drones or male bees. It usually has around 50,000 bees. Worker bees go from one flower to another, collecting nectar. When they sip the nectar, they store it in their bodies in order to make honey when they return to the hive. In one trip, a bee visits 50 to 100 flowers. Bees have 5 eyes and 6 legs. It takes a great effort and hard work from bees to make the honey we enjoy.
