A1 Read the following passage, then answer the questions: (الغربية ٢٠٢٣)

Honeybees make buzzing sounds when they fly, but that is not the way how they communicate. Instead, they do some amazing things to tell other bees things they need to know. Dancing is the instrumental way of communication between bees especially when needing to tell where to find flowers. When a bee locates those flowers, it returns to the hive and does a special "dance." For a bee, a dance means moving in a certain way as it crawls around. There are "round dances" that bees do when the flowers are close the hive. There are also "waggle dances," which the bees do when the flowers are farther away. Bees' dances are not the only way a bee communicates. Bees also produce chemical called pheromones. If an animal like a bear approaches the beehive, the honeybees' bodies start to make these special chemicals. Other bees sense these pheromones and know that an animal is threatening the hive. They all start to fly out to try to sting the animal and scare it away.

One of the results of technology and population growth is the increase of pollution throughout the world. According to a United Nations report, the future of all life on earth will be endangered if man does not control contamination of the environment. It is time to realize the full extent of the dangers that face mankind. For instance, here in Egypt, look at our River Nile which is the artery of life in Egypt. It is strange to see how everything is thrown into it as if it were our litter basket, instead of keeping it clean and pure we pollute it. We ourselves, not our "enemies", dirty it with our own hands. Some farmers wash themselves, their clothes, their animals and their pots and pans in its water. They even throw their dead animals and birds into it. Some people living in cities and towns throw their old tyres and cars. They also throw their old broken bottles and rusty tins into it. Factories throw their waste chemicals into it. Such chemicals cause lots of problems: cancer, brain damage, and high infant mortality rates. Throwing waste is another problem which is difficult to control. In this way, the water of the Nile is poisoned, killing our fish, poisoning our lands, weakening our crops and destroying our health. So, it would be foolish to shut our eyes to the dangers of the pollution that man causes to the very thing on which his life depends. It is a must to keep our Nile clean.

Friendship is one of the most valuable relationships we can have in our lives. A true friend is someone who is always there for you, no matter what. They are there to listen when you need someone to talk to, to offer support and encouragement when you're feeling down, and to celebrate your successes with you. The value of friendship lies not just in what your friends can do for you, but also in what you can do for them. Research has shown that having strong friendships is linked to better mental health, greater life satisfaction, and even a longer lifespan. When we have people we can rely on, we feel less alone in the world and more connected. Friends provide a sense of belonging and purpose, and they help us navigate the ups and downs of life. Whether it's through shared experiences or just being there for each other, friends make life richer and more meaningful. Of course, like any relationship, friendships require effort and investment. We need to show up for our friends, be there for them when they need us, and make time for them in our busy lives. But the rewards of friendship are well worth the effort. In a world that can often feel isolated and disconnected, having strong friendships can be a source of comfort, joy, and fulfillment. So, value your friends, invest in your relationships, and reap the benefits of one of life's greatest treasures.

Many of us know that eating late is bad. A new study says that eating late at night could make us sick. Researchers say that eating a few hours before bed means there is a higher risk of obesity. The research team looked into why eating late increased the risk of gaining weight. It was found that eating late increases hunger by as much as two times, so we eat more. Late eaters also eat unhealthy food, especially fast food. Finally, late eaters move around less before sleeping. This means they do not burn off calories.

The study was a small scale one. The researchers looked at the eating habits of five women and eleven men between the ages of 25 and 59. All of the participants were fat, but in good health. They ate breakfast regularly and exercised a little. For two weeks before each test, they did not drink coffee. They also did not smoke or take any medicine or drugs. They all had to keep a sleep diary so researchers knew their sleeping and waking times. One of the researchers said, "I think what the study is telling us is that it is really beneficial to stop eating late into the night."

It is a disgusting fact that many different wild animals throughout the world are in danger. The reasons for this are many and varied, but we must blame pollution, pesticides, the disturbance of animals and their natural environment and man's greed. Industry has grown enormously, and it has become common practice for factories to dispose of waste materials in streams and rivers, causing great loss of river life. Modern agricultural methods include using pesticides which control insects classified as pests, but which also destroy many that are not. An increase in population had meant more building which results in the destruction of much of the countryside that provides shelter for wild animals. To satisfy man's selfish desires, the polar bear in North America is under threat, hunted by sportsmen. Whales are killed for the oil and the food they yield. There are only a few of the species under threat. But the problem is receiving world-wide recognition, and some actions are being taken. For example, pollution in the River Thames has been greatly reduced, trading in some furs had been forbidden, and the organisations like "Friends of the Earth" do valuable work in this field. We should take serious steps to conserve our environment and protect it from destruction.

Dreams have interested, puzzled, and even frightened people. They thought that dreams always came true, and that they came from something outside the person dreaming. Since the end of the 19th century, physicians, psychologists and other scientists have been studying dreams. Yet, they still have much to learn. At times, dreams are wish-fulfilling. Dreamers occasionally dream they are being chased by robbers, or are in danger from fire or flood. These frightening dreams are called nightmares. People usually have nightmares when they are upset about something. Studies about the causes of dreams show many reasons. For example, changes in the brain occur during sleep, and these are probably related to dreaming. But no one knows enough yet about the brain changes in dreaming to say exactly what they are. A dreamer's health affects his dreams. A person who is ill will have different kinds of dreams from those of one who is well. If a person is hungry, or cold, or tired, his dreams may include these feelings. In addition, a large part of any dream comes from the events of the day before. Often the person or situations in a night dream are those the dreamer met during the day. The feelings of happiness or disappointment which came out in dreams were probably in the dreamer before. All that dream does is to give them an outlet.
