Lifeline Express is the world's first hospital on a train. It started with a simple idea: take the hospital to people who do not have access to health care services in rural areas. An Indian foundation suggested the idea to the Ministry of Railways. Shortly after, the Railways and the foundation signed an agreement in which the Railways would offer a three-cabin train and provide water and electricity while the foundation would provide medical services.

There are fewer than 10 doctors to every 10,000 inhabitants in India. Many people must travel hundreds of miles to reach the nearest hospital. So, the train hospital is their only hope for medical treatment. For 26 years, Lifeline Express has been travelling through India to bring health services to millions of Indians who are in dire need of health care. It has helped many patients with sight, hearing or movement problems.

The Lifeline Express train regularly camps in different parts of the country. Each camp lasts 35 days and involves treating patients, training local doctors and raising health awareness among rural population. Dr. Sarin, Lifeline Express chairman, said: "Now, the train hospital is operating with only three cabins. Soon, two new cabins will be added. A lot of help comes from companies, individuals, and doctors across the country. But we still need to improve our services. We ought to make them more convenient. We need a blood bank and modern equipment to do major surgeries. Hundreds of villagers are in urgent need of help."

The Lifeline Express train is not only treating patients but changing their social lives as well. Dr. Nagda is a surgeon who has volunteered to work on the Lifeline Express train for the last 16 years. He remembers receiving a wedding invitation from Sajida, a girl he once treated. "When she came to me as a child, she had a foot injury. She could not walk properly. I told her father that after treatment she would be able to go to school. After the surgery, she could walk normally. She even finished her studies and got married." The train hospital has gained international fame. It has saved over a million lives across the country and has inspired similar experiences in many other countries.

VII - Summary Making (8 Marks)

Read the following passage, then do as required:

Many perfumes are made by taking scented oil from natural ingredients or chemicals. These natural ingredients can include various plants, fruits and woods. For scents that do not occur in nature or do not produce essential oils, chemicals are used to increase the fragrance. Then, when all the ingredients have been chosen, they need to be blended. The oils are blended together according to a formula that has been tested by a master in the perfume industry. Later, perfumes are often aged for months or even years after the scent has been blended together because aging allows the different scents to mix. Finally, quality control is an important aspect of the perfume making process. It ensures that the perfume is free from any harmful or undesired products.
