Nothing can live without energy. People, animals and plants need energy to survive. Most of the energy we use still comes from fossil fuels like coal, oil and gas. We call these none-renewable forms of energy because they are limited and expensive. The use of fuels increases the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and pollute the environment. Now water, wind and the sun are some forms of renewable energy. They are inexpensive and do not pollute the environment. Solar power, for example helps farmers to irrigate their dry land. Also, some governments depend on it to generate electricity and save energy in our homes and workplaces in order to stop using none-renewable sources of energy.
