One of England's greatest writers, Charles Dickens, was born in 1812. His father was careless with money. When he was 12, he had to leave school to work in a shoe-dye factory in London because his father had been imprisoned for debt. This experience deeply shamed and frightened the young boy, and those feelings were later expressed in his writing, particularly in his descriptions of the working conditions of the poor Victorian factories.

When his father came into inheritance, young Dickens could return to his school but the family's fortunes were never very secure. At the age of 15, he left school to join a law firm as a clerk. Then after four years, he went into journalism, reporting law cases and parliamentary debates. These work experiences helped to develop his social awareness, which would be reflected in his novel.

Dickens' success as a writer began when he started writing "The Pickwick Papers" in 1836. These were originally intended as a humorous narrative to accompany a series of drawings. Within four months, he had become famous. The Pickwick Papers was not only humorous, but made a serious attempt to look at the legal system and to show how justice was applied. Also, interestingly, it is a clear illustration of how Dickens' private life was reflected in his work, as Mr. Pickwick spent some time in debtors prison, just like Dickens' own father.

Dickens' early life had clearly enabled him to write about the poor dispossessed with understanding and compassion. This compassion also made itself to be felt in practical when he helped to establish a home for destitute women and encouraged slum clearance developments in sanitary provisions.
