Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

The natural life span of a domesticated horse is about 25–30 years, 10 years down from what it was in the wild. You can tell a horse's age from the number of teeth it has. They get all their teeth by the age of 5, after which those teeth just get longer.

Horses are adapted to run, allowing them to quickly escape from predators, possessing an excellent sense of balance and a strong fight-or-flight response. Horses have close to 360 degree all around vision. The only place they cannot see is directly behind or right in front of them, which is why it's dangerous to stand behind a horse. If they feel something behind them, they may kick first and ask questions later! It also means that they cannot see a jump once they are about four feet from it, and have to rely on memory as to its height and shape! Each of the horse's two eyes works independently wherever a horse's ear points it is the direction where the horse is looking. A horse is able to sleep standing up as it is able to lock its leg muscles so that it doesn't fall asleep.

Horses and humans interact in a wide variety of sports competitions and non-competitive recreational pursuits, as well as in working activities such as police work, agriculture, entertainment and therapy.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

The oldest living things on Earth are trees. Some of California's sequoias have for four thousand years looked down on the changes in the landscape and the comings and goings of humans. They sprouted from tiny seeds about the time the Egyptian pyramids were being built. Today these seeds seem as remote and inaccessible as the rocks and mountain cliffs on which they grow, like cathedral columns holding up the sky. It is hard to imagine them playing any part in the lives of mere humans or being in any way affected by the creatures that pass at their feet.

Lesser trees, however, have played an intimate role in the lives of people since they first appeared on Earth. Trees fed the fires that warmed humans: they provided shelter, food and medicine and even clothing. They also shaped people's spiritual horizons. Trees expressed the mystery of life, as they moved through the cycle of seasons, from life to death and back to life again. Trees were the largest living things around humans and they knew that some trees had been standing on the same spot in their parent's and grandparents' time, and would continue to stand long after they were gone. No wonder these trees became symbols of strength, fruitfulness, and everlasting life.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

What makes it rain? Rain falls from clouds for the same reason anything falls to Earth. The Earth's gravity pulls it. But every cloud is made of water droplets or ice crystals. Why doesn't rain or snow fall constantly from all clouds? The droplets or ice crystals in clouds are exceedingly small. The effect of gravity on them is minute. Air currents move and lift droplets so that the net downward displacement is zero, even though the droplets are in constant motion.

Droplets and ice crystals behave somewhat like dust in the air made visible in a ray of sunlight. To the casual observer, dust seems to act in a totally random way, moving without a fixed direction. But in fact, dust particles are much larger than water droplets and they finally fall. The cloud droplet of average size is only 1/2500 inch in diameter. It is so small that it would take sixteen hours to fall half a mile in perfectly still air, and it does not fall out of moving air at all. Only when the droplet grows to a diameter of 1/125 inch or larger can it fall from the cloud. The average raindrop contains a million times as much water as a tiny cloud droplet. The growth of a cloud droplet to a size large enough to fall out is the cause of rain and other forms of precipitation. This important growth process is called "coalescence."

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Sleep is essential for maintaining good health and well-being throughout life. It helps the body repair itself, supports brain function, and strengthens the immune system. People who do not get enough sleep may experience memory problems, difficulty concentrating, and a weakened immune system.

Sleep happens in cycles. There are two main types of sleep: non-REM sleep and REM (Rapid Eye Movement) sleep. Non-REM sleep has three stages, with the third stage being the deepest. During REM sleep, the brain is active, and most dreaming occurs. Both types of sleep are necessary for rest and recovery.

The amount of sleep a person needs depends on their age. Babies need the most sleep, about 14–17 hours a day, while adults usually need 7–9 hours. Lack of sleep can lead to serious health problems such as obesity, heart disease, and depression. Therefore, maintaining a regular sleep schedule and creating a comfortable sleeping environment are important for overall well-being.

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Renewable energy sources are becoming more popular as people look for ways to reduce pollution and protect the environment. Unlike fossil fuels, renewable energy comes from sources that are naturally replenished, such as sunlight, wind, and water.

Solar energy, for example, uses panels to convert sunlight into electricity. Wind energy is harnessed using wind turbines, while hydropower generates electricity through the movement of water. These sources do not produce harmful emissions like coal or oil, making them a cleaner alternative.

One of the biggest challenges of renewable energy is storage. Since the sun does not always shine and the wind does not always blow, scientists are working on developing better battery technology to store excess energy. Despite these challenges, many countries are investing in renewable energy to reduce dependence on fossil fuels and create a more sustainable future.
