I. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D: (50 marks)

Modern medicine started to emerge in the late 18th century and therefore, there were many improvements on medical tools and machines, especially after the Industrial Revolution. In the 1800s, physicians learned that illnesses were caused by germs and hospitals began to focus on keeping clean to keep germs away. As a result, nursing came to be thought of as a respectable job. The 20th century was characterized by new biological treatments such as antibiotics in addition to advancement in chemistry, genetics and radiography. Arabic medicine has made a major contribution to the development of pharmacy. It is logical for doctors to discover new drugs while looking for ways to treat their patients. They wrote about them in booklets about the history of the disease called "al-Mujarrabat". Subsequently, good and lesser known drugs were extracted from it. Physicians have tried to use simple medicines to determine the exact effect of the entered component into the disease. Still, some doctors have prescribed and combined the medications that they themselves formulated. Today healthcare isn't just about doctors; nurses, physical therapists and technicians are all part of a large health care system that helps to keep people healthy. Modern medicine is characterized by surgeries, the use of radiation, microscopy, research and analysis in the detection of disease or ailment by using modern technological tools.

The oud is a short-necked, pear-shaped musical instrument with five or six pairs of strings. The two strings in each pair sound the same. Traditionally, players plucked the strings with a bird's feather. The word oud comes from al-oud which means 'a branch of wood'. The oud is the main instrument in Arab countries and is also popular in Turkey, Iran, Armenia and Azerbaijan. It is the ancestor of the European lute and the guitar. In the past, people believed that the sound of the oud could help to treat illnesses by 'calming people's hearts'. People used the oud to accompany poetry.

Abdul Rahman Jabakji was born in Aleppo, Syria in 1931. When he was still very young, he decided that he wanted to learn the oud. So, he searched for books on the art of playing the oud. To his surprise, he found that there was not just one book and one method. There were many different approaches that had been developed all over the Arab world, for example in Syria, Iraq and Egypt. This was how his lifelong exploration of musical techniques began. Jabakji learned to play musical instruments similar to the oud all over the world, including the guitar and the mandolin. He worked for more than fifteen years on this project, and eventually managed to write his own book. The Method for Oud is an important guide for every student of oud playing who wants to learn from a master whose work is based on historical musical research. Abdul Rahman Jabakji died in 2003, having devoted most of his long life to the study of music and the improvement of his oud technique. The concept of engineering has been around since ancient times, as primitive engineers created basic inventions such as pulley, lever, and the wheel. Each of these inventions is consistent with a modern definition of engineering, and makes use of basic mechanical principles to develop useful tools and objects. The inventions of the Scottish engineer James Watt gave rise to the modern mechanical engineering, which opened the door wide for the development of specialized machinery and their maintenance tools during the Industrial Revolution and led to the rapid growth of mechanical engineering in its native Britain and abroad. Chemical engineering, like mechanical engineering, developed in the nineteenth century during the Industrial Revolution. The work of James Maxwell and Heinrich Hertz in the late nineteenth century gave birth to the field of electronics and electronic engineering. Today, aeronautical engineering deals with aircraft design; this field of engineering has been growing day after day to allow humans make their dreams come true to invade the outer space by designing better spaceship. Finally, with the advent of computer technology in the 1990's, the first search engine was built by the computer engineer Alan Emtage. The brilliant minds of engineers are still creating whatever it takes to elevate our world to make it a better place to live.

1 developed the world's first Internet search engine.
A	Imhotep	B	James Watt	C	Thomas Savery	D	Alan Emtage
2	Chemical engineering was developed in the century during the Industrial Revolution.
A	19th	B	20th	C	18th	D	17th
3	Choose a suitable title to the text:
A	Medical Invention	B	History of Engineering	C	Successful Inventions	D	Computer Engineering
4	One of these sentences is not mentioned in the text:
A	The first search engine was built by Alan Emtage.	B	Engineering has been around since ancient times.	C	Eli Whitney patented the cotton gin in 1793.	D	Ancient inventions is consistent with modern definitions of engineering.

Technology experts are predicting that the computer games of the future will be a lot more difficult both for games producers and for players. In particular, they say, games will look much more realistic, and computer-controlled characters will be more believable. This means that keen computer games players will almost certainly spend more time playing games than they do at the moment. New technology will enable companies to create more complex games. The graphics of computer games will definitely improve, but this may cause problems. Firstly, game studios will have to employ hundreds of animators to produce enough features to fill huge computer worlds. Secondly, designers may spend too much time on visual effects and forget about the quality of the games themselves. One computer expert said: 'When you move away from games where characters just fight each other, speaking will become much more important. We will have to make our game characters more intelligent; in the end they will even have conversations with each other'. Another change that seems probable is the increase in people playing the same game on the mobile phone networks. Many of these games are free at the moment, so companies don't earn much money from them. Some people are predicting that in future, as multi-player games become more and more popular, players will have to pay for every episode.

6	According to technology experts, computer games of the future will be both for games producers and for players.
A	impossible	B	a lot more difficult	C	less difficult	D	the same
7	Computer game players will spend more time playing games because
A	computer games will look much more realistic.	B	they will have nothing important to do.	C	there won't be schools any more.	D	they will onboard a big space ship.
8	Game studios will have to employ hundreds of animators to produce enough features to fill huge computer worlds because
A	the new computer games will be free.	B	the new computer game will have less characters.	C	the graphics of computer games will improve.	D	the new games will talk less time to pass.
9	One of these sentences is false :
A	Game studios will need less employees to develop these complex games.	B	People playing the same game on the mobile phone networks will increase.	C	Game characters will have to be more intelligent.	D	Future games won't be free as they are now.
10	The word " furious " in the text means :
A	make or manufacture from components or raw materials.	B	a talk between two or more people, in which news and ideas are exchanged.	C	the mental and moral qualities distinctive to an individual.	D	having or showing intelligence, especially of a high level.

I. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D:(50 marks)

The first spark started in the year 1950, when a test of the ability of a machine to exhibit intelligent behaviour equivalent to that of a human was done. Since then, the term AI has been introduced and closely associated with the field of artificial intelligence which was popular until the end of the 1980s. In the 1990s, the new concept of "intelligent agent" emerged when AI was not only limited to computer science, but developed to include other areas like health, security, education, music, art, and business applications. Many AI applications are deeply embedded in the infrastructure of every industry, and they are expected, in a few years, to touch nearly all the industries. However, AI technologies are still limited to very specific applications. One of the AI limitations is the lack of "common sense" the power to judge information beyond its acquired knowledge. AI is also limited in terms of emotional intelligence. Moreover, AI can only detect basic human emotional states such as anger, joy, sadness, stress, pain, fear, and neutrality. Emotional intelligence is one of the next hurdles to higher levels of personalization. Rational and harmonic interactions are required between application-specific projects and research ideas to sustain the progress of AI. There are also fears about the impact of technology on our society. Such fears should not hinder the progress of AI, but motivate the development of a systematic framework on which future AI will flourish, so it is quite important to apart science fiction from practical reality.

1	The first spark of AI started in the of the twentieth century.
A	middle	B	beginning	C end	D start
2	Emotional intelligence is one of the next to higher levels of personalization.

Once upon a time, in a village, there lived a poor man who worked hard every day. One night he dreamt that if he went to the city, he would become very rich. The following day, he set out cheerfully for the city and, after a long journey, arrived late at night. Because he was tired, he slept in the doorway of a house.

The next morning, the owner of the house found him and thought he was a thief. Angrily the owner called the police who took the poor man away and threw him into prison. A week later, he was brought before a judge. When the judge saw that he was a stranger, he asked the poor man where he was from and why he had come to the city. He replied honestly that he was from a faraway village and that he had come to the city because of his dream. The judge laughed loudly and told him that he should ignore his dreams. Then the judge said that he had dreamt three times that there was a vast treasure buried under a twisted tree behind a well in a garden. However, he had wisely ignored the dream.

Finally, he set the man free and told him to return to his village. The man realised that the judge had described the garden of his own house. Therefore, when he returned to the village he found the treasure easily. He lived the rest of his life as a rich and contented man.

At the age of 19, Aisha became the youngest Arab woman to gain a commercial pilot's license. Aisha was brought up in Abu Dhabi. Like most parents, her father, who was a successful diplomat and her mother, who was a university graduate, wanted the best for their daughter. At the age of 14, Aisha was fascinated by planes, and told her father that she wanted to become a pilot. Some fathers might have told their daughters to go out and play with her friends and forget the idea, but not Aisha's. He took her seriously and arranged for Aisha to go to the best gliding school in the region. Near the school was an aviation school, and when Aisha saw the fantastic planes there, she decided she wanted to fly commercial planes. And that is what she did. In three months at the aviation school she qualified for her private pilot's license, and fifteen months later she gained her commercial pilot's license. Aisha's training was hard. She had to forget her private life to achieve her dream. She studied flight physics, learned to use computers, improved her English, serviced aircraft engines, and spent time flying. In all, she did 285 hours' flying. In Abu Dhabi, where she lived, Aisha became quite famous when she got her pilot's license. However, she did not want to be in the news. She felt there were more important news stories in the world, like child poverty and health problems.

Today, tea is the most popular drink in the world. It is drunk by more people than either coffee or cocoa and the number of people drinking it is increasing year by year. The cultivation of tea plants began in China over two thousand years ago and from there its popularity spread first to Japan and then to the rest of the world. Together with silk and porcelain, tea is still one of China's most important exports.

In China, everyone from taxi drivers to civil servants drinks tea every day. Although people drink it at all times of the day and night, it is especially popular after meals. In warm summer weather, people believe it helps them to keep cool and relax, and this is why there are so many traditional tea-houses in Chinese towns and villages, where local people, especially the elderly, meet regularly and chat with their friends. In many towns, tea-houses open in the late afternoon and quickly fill up with students and business people.

In the capital of China, Beijing, there are many world-famous tea houses. One of these is Lao She Tea-house, which is popular with celebrities from China and elsewhere. I. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D:(50 marks)

Robots help people to focus on the creative process when relying on such intelligent machines to take care of unpleasant physical and mechanical work. The greatest benefits of robots should mean for people staying away from unhealthy environments, such as mines and deep waters. For many industrial countries, using robots could increase production with low costs. The third domain for robots would be doing productive activities that people cannot easily perform. At present, the main challenge of robotisation is in combining human and robot activities, trying to find the best human-robot match. Meanwhile, robots have the ability to do heavy-duty jobs with accuracy and repeatability; human beings have the privilege of creativity, flexibility, decision-making and adaptability. When experts reach high degree of co-operation, manufacturers would enhance efficiency and capacity, as well as improve quality and industrial working conditions. Motivational influences of robotics among workers and managers can be amazing. This issue has been recognised in the medical sector in some empirical operations despite the fact that the use of robotics in risky tasks need special attention from safety and health experts. Finally, eliminating the negative side-effects of new robot applications is the key challenge in ongoing technological transition period.

In the early 1940 s, a Hungarian journalist called Laszlo Biro visited a newspaper office. He watched the production process and was amazed by how quickly the printing ink dried on the paper. It was then that Biro decided to design a pen which used quick-drying ink instead of the normal ink which traditional pens used and which took a long time to dry. In 1943, Laszlo and his brother, who was a chemist, produced the first 'biros'. The pens became an instant success-mainly because the ink dried quickly and they were stronger than normal ink pens, but also because they worked in planes at high altitude. Two years later, an American company produced similar pens, but because of the technology involved, these first ballpoint pens were very expensive at $ 10 each. In 1949, the first cheap ballpoint pens were produced in France by Marcel Bich. These 'Bic' pens eventually sold on the American market for only 10 cents each.

The Bic company has been successfully making ballpoint pens ever since then. The most important part of a ballpoint pen is the ball. As it moves across a piece of paper, the ball revolves in its socket and transfers quick-drying ink on to the paper. This mechanism is very important. If the ball is too tight in the socket, the ball will not move. If it is too loose, the ink will dry up. Ballpoint pens can write in many different situations but they cannot write upside down because the ink needs gravity to act on the ball.

6	The idea for a pen which used quick-drying ink instead of the normal ink came to Laszlo Biro after
A	visiting a newspaper office.	B	visiting a museum exhibiting pens.	C	watching a documentary.	D	having a dream about it.

Despite the enormous human cost, WWI did have some results, precisely in the field of medicine as new medical equipment was urgently needed and quickly developed to deal with the huge number of injuries. The new weapons used in the war caused many deaths and those injured suffered very severe wounds, and this pushed the medical establishment to build on recent discoveries and come up with solutions for the new problems, which faced doctors. X-rays' use became much more widespread during the war to help detect fragments of bombs and bullets buried in tissue. Stretchers for carrying the injured had also been developed to rescue the wounded from the battlefield by sending in stretcher-bearers to bring them back as quickly as possible. The profession of paramedic who is able to apply first aid in the field also comes from this time. Blood transfusion was impractical in these early days at the time of the war, and by 1917, indirect transfusion had been developed and blood stored on ice for up to 26 days. For many, this was the most significant medical breakthrough of the war. The war also saw advances in treating wounds, which demanded the patient to be unconscious while undergoing medical procedures. In 1917, Henry Boyle invented an anesthesia machine and operations done without pain- a wonderful innovation.

Thomas Edison is by far one of the most famous inventors in history. He holds 1,093 patents to his name. However, when attempting to invent a commercially-viable electric light bulb, he failed over 10,000 times. When asked by a reporter how it felt to fail so many times, he merely stated, "I have not failed 10,000 times. I have not failed once. I have succeeded in proving that those 10,000 ways will not work. When I have eliminated the ways that will not work, I will find the way that will work."

Albert Einstein, one of the greatest thinkers of our time, didn't speak until he was four-years old. He also failed his entrance exam to the Swiss Federal Polytechnic school located in Zurich at sixteen-years old. And, even his father, up until the time of his death, considered his son to be a major failure. After eventually graduating from college, Einstein actually worked as an insurance salesman, but quit after some time because he failed at that as well.

Bill Gates has amassed a mind-boggling net worth of close to $80 billion, and is known as the infamous father of modern personal-computing software. I. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D:(50 marks)

Because of the substantial scientific and technological development that affected many disciplines, many branches have appeared within the specialisation of engineering in particular, including medical technology engineering, which is also called biomedical engineering. This field is concerned with studying the body from an engineering point of view, in order to design suitable artificial limbs, organs, or other medical devices.

Medical technology engineering helps doctors define their tasks and facilitates their work more, so the medical device has become an essential assistant for the doctors in all steps, starting from diagnosis, to the end of the treatment course. The need for development in this field has made designing medical devices a great priority, and this in turn led to the intervention of electrical, mechanical computer engineers and others, whose knowledge does not depend on their specialties only, but rather, they must be familiar with all aspects of human body, from biology, anatomy and physiology. So that the medical devices designed are useful for the human body.

Medical engineers work in many fields like well-equipped hospitals and clinics in particular, medical companies and the advanced major research centers in universities. In the end, medical engineers work in cooperation with all disciplines, including nursing, medicine, biology, and other disciplines.

1 engineering is concerned with studying the body from an engineering point of view.
A	Electrical	B	Computer	C	Mechanical	D	Biomedical
2	Designing medical devices has become a great due to the need for development in medical engineering.
A	intensity	B	priority	C	determination	D	insurance

When the summer holiday is over, most students start to think of the new school year. There are some tips for a smooth school year start that might help the students overcome the stress and organize their study environment.

First of all, students should reconnect with a healthy lifestyle. It requires them to get used to having regular and enough hours of sleep and eating healthy food. This, of course, needs several days of adaptation, so it is essential to start adapting with this new routine a few days before school. Also, they should buy study resources available for their grade. Having a good dictionary, an encyclopedia, educational software and other things are certainly very beneficial for any student.

Secondly, creating a pleasant study environment a few days before school starts is a must. A student can donate his old books, pens and school things if they are still usable. He should not forget to clean up his desk and make it a comfortable place to do homework. A workplace should be a quiet well-lit corner where it feels good.

Finally, it is very important for students to talk to their parents about their fears and worries about the new school year. If someone feels anxious, his parents will surely find a way to help him get over these fears and gain more confidence. Parents will certainly teach their children how to believe in their abilities, how to behave in different situations with their classmates and teachers, how to solve their problems and how to make progress.

6	It requires students to get used to having and eating healthy food.
A	studying hard	B	books and an encyclopedia	C	enough hours of sleep	D	meeting their old friends

Medical technology engineering helps doctors define their tasks and facilitates their work more, so the medical device has become an essential assistant for the doctors in all steps, starting from diagnosis, to the end of the treatment course. The need for development in this field has made designing medical devices a great priority, and this in turn led to the intervention of electrical, mechanical computer engineers and others, whose knowledge does not depend on their specialties only, but rather, they must be familiar with all aspects of human body, from biology, anatomy and physiology. So that the medical devices designed are useful for the human body.

Medical devices can be divided into two parts, diagnostic medical devices, most notably the ultrasound device, and medical therapeutic devices used in chemical treatments. Another classification includes three categories. Firstly, we have simple devices such as bandages, body temperature meters and others. There are also more complex devices that require a certain amount of caution, such as those that emit X-rays. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), originally known as the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, is responsible for providing humanitarian and developmental aid to children worldwide and it has won the Nobel Prize; the first to be awarded to an organisation. Despite being highly active in fundraising, awareness, relief work and research, very few people know the origin of the organisation. UNICEF is supported entirely by the voluntary contributions of governments, non-governmental organisations, foundations, corporations and private individuals and receives no funding from the assessed dues of the United Nations. Most of the fundraising is done by UNICEF's 36 national committees, the voluntary support of millions of people around the world, partners in government, civil society and the private sector.

UNICEF was created in 1946 and began with a definite mission of providing emergency food and healthcare to children in the countries that had been destroyed by World War II. In 1953, Its original name was changed to the United Nation's Children Fund to reflect its broader mission, but it retained the original acronym, after being officially adopted as a permanent branch of the UN in 1954.

The best way to learn something is to make mistakes first. Thomas Edison, who invented light bulb, did hundreds of experiments that failed. However, he believed that it is never too late to start again. Failures and false starts are the condition of success. In fact, a surprising number of everyday objects had their beginnings in a mistake or a misunderstanding. Penicillin and even bread are all unexpected inventions. Careless lab scientist Fleming noticed penicillin by accident when he returned from two-week vacation to find that mold had developed on some of his samples and destroyed all the bacteria it touched. A tired Egyptian worker invented bread when the dough rose during his sleep.

Most of our life experiences are great opportunities to learn new skills for personal development. But many people don't take advantage of such opportunities simply because they don't have a mindset focused on learning. It is greatly different from conventional learning as there may be no teacher or mentor involved. The learner plays an active part in the learning process. It is an individual-focused learning technique for learning from experience. The most important thing to remember is that you need to learn from your mistakes. If you don't, then there is no sense in making them. Shift your mindset and understand that there are actually no mistakes, but lessons and learning opportunities.

The immune system has a vital role since it protects your body from harmful substances, germs and cell changes that could make you ill. It is made up of various organs, cells and proteins. As long as your immune system is running smoothly, you don't notice that it's there. But if it stops working properly you get ill. Germs that your body has never encountered before are also likely to make you ill. Some germs will only make you ill the first time you encounter them. These include childhood diseases like chickenpox. Without an immune system, we would have no way to fight harmful things that enter our body from the outside or harmful changes that occur inside our body. The main tasks of the body's immune system are: 1. to fight disease-causing germs (pathogens) like bacteria, viruses, parasites or fungi, and to remove them from the body. 2. to recognize and neutralize harmful substances from the environment. 3. to fight disease-causing changes in the body, such as cancer cells.

The immune system can be activated by a lot of different things that the body doesn't recognize as its own. These are called antigens. Examples of antigens include the proteins on the surfaces of bacteria, and viruses. When these antigens attach to special receptors on the immune cells (immune system cells), a whole series of processes are triggered in the body. Once the body has come into contact with a disease-causing germ for the first time, it usually stores information about the germ and how to fight it.

The Geneva Convention is a set of international laws that protect injured soldiers and civilians during war. The law makes sure that every person is treated well and with respect. The first treaty was written in 1864 but it is often changed due to different types of war. It was significantly updated in 1949 after World War Two. Syria is one of 200 countries in the world that agrees to follow the laws of the Geneva Convention. The agreement is important because during war a country might need help from neutral organisations to care for the wounded. The Red Crescent is one of the organisations that provides aid during times of war. It also helps injured people during peacetime, and you may have seen ambulances with the Red Crescent symbol in the street. Countries who follow the laws of the Geneva Convention must not attack civilians, and they are not allowed to fight someone who is already hurt. It is illegal to ignore these rules, and a country found guilty of committing war crimes will be tried in a court of law and can be severely punished. All soldiers, civilians and prisoners may receive medical help from doctors and nurses. They can be taken to a hospital without being attacked. Food can also be given to people involved in a conflict. Under the Geneva Convention it does not matter what religion, gender or nationality a person is or what his political views are; if someone is sick he must be treated without prejudice.

Diana, a student from Aleppo, Syria, is studying in Montreal. The following passages are taken from her diary during her first six months in Canada. February 17, moving to a country with a very different climate could be a challenge! In Syria, we have a Mediterranean weather, with mild, rainy winters. Here in Canada winter is very cold and snowy. Temperature average is between the single digits and the -20s. It wasn't a problem because most buildings here are well heated. This city knows how to stay warm. When the weather gets too chilly, I head to the Underground City – a series of interconnected tunnels beneath Montreal which run for over 32 kms. The tunnels connect shopping malls, universities, banks and seven metro stations.

April 10, I miss my mom's cooking a lot, the food here is delicious but it's not really the same. Foods, typically considered national dishes of Canada, include poutine, Montreal bagels and butter tarts. My most amazing experience was Sugar time, usually at the end of March. It is the season when maple syrup is produced, and some parties are organized in "la cabane à sucre", a place where maple sap is boiled to produce maple syrup. It is heated above 100 degrees, and the drops are placed on the snow. It becomes like a candy, a caramel that is served on a stick!

July 31, I'm staying in a building with a Quebecois family who are teaching me about Montreal a lot. They told me not to make quick decisions, and not to leave right away even if I wanted to.

Relaxation strategies can be useful in reducing general levels of anxiety and fear over time. For each person there is a different set of activities and skills that help them relax. Our best strategies are to find the ones that work for us and practice them. The techniques are called mindfulness skills and are connected to meditation practices. They have been used by more and more people to regulate their emotions and calm their minds. One way to think about relaxation is that it is the absence of tension in the body's muscles. We can actually influence how anxious we feel gradually by learning to release tension in the muscles through daily exercises. This communicates calmness and safety to our body, reducing the body's need to activate the "fight or flight" response. Yoga, as a clear evidence of mindfulness, incorporates a powerful combination of mental and physical elements: breathing, stretching, meditation, and strengthening exercises. All these activities aim at improving physical and mental well-being. Many of us enjoy a change between now and then, watching candles, beaches, falling leaves, etc. Such views can drag minds into deep thinking, fleeing away from the hasty stressed world waiting behind. Sounds can also have a soothing effect on our minds. The nature can bring in us a lot of relief, while listening to its songs performed by ocean waves for instance. The most important thing is to set realistic goals in line with life aims. Remember to take one small step at a time to reach larger goals.

I. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D:(50 marks)

The word "robot" stems from the Czech "robotnik" which means a "slave". Man has built a robot after his/her image. Possibly, that is why human beings have a variety of strong emotions, both negative and positive towards robots.

The relative advantage of robots and intelligent machines is accompanied with their ability to play a range of movements and thinking endlessly and tirelessly. When designing robots, it is essential for planners to focus on the robots' ability to follow patterns. Due to this engineering reality, robots are certainly specialised in the first step. Another complicated sort is the generalised robot, which can to some extent imitate humans. In the future, the memory of robots is expected to become very extensive. This will allow huge amounts of data storage, the thing which will be reflected in the robot's ability to fulfil a lot of operational tasks. Consequently, the use of robotics will be expanded.

Robots offer people a helping hand to focus on the creative process when relying on such intelligent machines to take care of unpleasant physical and mechanical work. The greatest benefits of robots should mean for people staying away from unhealthy environments, such as mines and deep waters. For many industrial countries, using robots could increase production with low costs. The third domain for robots would be doing productive activities that people cannot easily perform.

1	The extensive memory of robots in the future will
A	allow robots to imitate human beings.	B	enable engineer to focus on other aspects.	C	allow huge amounts of data storage.	D	enable robots to have a life of their own.
2	The greatest benefits of robots should mean for people staying away from environments.

A	the ability to understand or do something.	B	a special right or advantage that a particular person has.	C	to do or achieve what was hoped or expected.	D	an area of knowledge that someone is responsible for.

II. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D: (50 marks)

The first paper was made from cloth nearly two thousand years ago in China. Although paper can be made from all kinds of materials, such as cotton fibres, grass or sugar cane, these days wood pulp is the material most commonly used to make ‘new paper’ – that is, paper which contains no old or recycled paper. The modern world uses so much paper that environmentalists have persuaded us that we should recycle old paper. There is an increasing awareness in Syria of the need to recycle both paper and other materials. Paper-recycling containers can now be found in some parts of the country and some government agencies have begun paper-recycling programmes. Also, there is greater education in schools about the need to take care of our environment. Although we use wood pulp from trees to make new paper, it is not true that recycling paper saves trees. Trees are a commercially grown long-term crop, so that when they are cut down, new ones are planted. Also, papermakers use the parts of trees that cannot be used in other industries such as building and furniture making. Nearly all new paper is made from wood grown in sustainable forests. A large proportion of household waste is paper or cardboard. About half of this is newspapers and magazines. For every tonne of paper used for recycling, we save 30,000 litres of water, 3,000—4,000 kwh of electricity and reduce air pollution. Recycling paper is less harmful to the environment than burying it in landfill sites. This is because paper that is buried in the ground rots and produces methane, which is a powerful greenhouse gas.

6	Paper can be made from all kinds of materials, such as
A	greenhouse gases	B	sugar	C	wood pulp	D	new paper
7	The advantages of recycling paper are:, electricity and reducing air pollution.

E-learning is the use of networked information and communication technology in teaching and learning. It combines all educational activities that are carried out by individuals or groups working online or offline, and on networked or separate computers and other electronic devices. E-learning is highly interactive and relies heavily upon graphics, video, and audio. However, there are often simulations to support in learning achievement, which could include 3D components. New software training is an example of a course that often includes a high degree of interactivity and simulations. The impact of e-learning is noticed in self-responsibility among students when they decide to study or not. It helps expand their knowledge by researching using the World Wide Web. Teachers allow them to acquire various computer skills and apply their knowledge and skills. This helps in the communication with their students at all times and increases the students' ability to study on their own. The importance of e-learning lies in the fact that the students need to be busy with what they are doing to improve learning outcomes. It enables students to become thinkers, learners and risk takers in a protected environment, so they need not rely on the teachers, as they can be independent. Learning can happen anywhere, anytime and anyhow. It encourages students to seek more from school. When the course is developed, it can be run as many times, at as many locations and for as many learners and thus it reduces the general cost and time.

II. Read the following text then choose the correct answer A, B, C or D:(50 marks)

The amount of sleep human beings need varies from individual to individual. We know that most adults need about 8 hours of sleep a day, but this number can vary greatly; 'short sleepers' may need only 5 hours, whereas 'long sleepers' may need 9 to 10 hours. Babies need about 16 hours a day while many teenagers need an average of 9 hours. As people get older, they tend to need less sleep; some elderly people wake up early in the morning and cannot sleep for more than five or six hours. Exactly how much we need depends on several factors, including our age, our daily routine, the quality of our sleep and our genetic make-up. How do we know if we are getting enough sleep? In general, if you feel drowsy during the day, you need more sleep. You may think that you are sleeping for long enough, but these are some of the signs that you may need more: you cannot concentrate at school or at work; you find it difficult to get up in the morning; you are moody or irritable; you have memory problems. So why is it important that we get enough sleep? Sleep provides our bodies with a chance to switch off. This allows us to recharge our mental and physical batteries and be ready for each new day. If we have slept well, we should wake up in the morning feeling alert and rested. People who have been deprived of sleep find it difficult to perform the simplest activities.
