Rana packed a small suitcase, said goodbye to her mother and hurried out of the house to catch the bus to the station. There was no one else waiting at the bus stop, so it looked as if a bus had just left. Rana looked at her watch anxiously: it was already two o'clock. Her train left at two-thirty, and since it would take at least twenty minutes to reach the station, she did not have much time to spare, even if a bus came along at once.

Just then a taxi came slowly down the road. Rana knew that the fare to the station was at least five shillings, which was more than she could afford; but she quickly made up her mind that it would be well worth the extra expense in order to be sure of catching her train. So she stopped the taxi and got in. She told the driver that she had to catch a train which left at half past two. The man nodded and said that he would take a short cut to get her to the station in good time.

All went well until just as they were coming out of a side street into the main road that led to the station, the taxi ran into a car. There was a loud crash and Rana was thrown forward so violently that she hit her head on the front seat. Both drivers got out and began shouting at each other. Rana got out as well, to ask them to stop quarrelling, but neither of them took any notice of her at all.

Rana was now quite sure that she was going to miss her train, although she was not very far from the station. She was wondering what to do when a bus came into sight, going in the direction of the station. The bus stop was not far off, so Rana got her suitcase out of the taxi and ran towards the bus, which had stopped to let some passengers get off. The bus conductor saw her running and did not ring the bell for the bus to start until she had got on. Rana reached the station just in time and managed to catch her train after all. But if she had waited for the taxi driver to stop arguing, she would probably have missed it.

As the train approached the seaside town where I was going to spend my holidays, I went into the corridor to stretch my legs. I stayed there a short while, breathing in the fresh sea air and exchanging a few words with one of the passengers, whom I had met earlier on the station platform.

When I turned to go back to my seat, I happened to glance into the compartment next to mine. Sitting there was a man who many years before had been my neighbour. He was a great talker, I remembered; it used to take hours to get away from him once he began a conversation. I was not at all sorry when he went to live in another part of London. We had not met since then, nor did I wish to meet him now, when my holiday was about to begin.

Luckily at that moment he was much too busy talking to the man opposite him to catch sight of me. I slipped back into my compartment, took down my two suitcases and carried them to the far end of the corridor so as to be ready to get off the train as soon as it stopped. The moment the train came to a halt, I called a porter, who in no time at all had carried my luggage out of the station and found me a taxi. As I drove towards my small hotel on the outskirts of the town, I breathed a deep sigh of relief at my narrow escape. There was little chance that I should run into my boring ex-neighbour.

When I reached the hotel, I went straight to my room and rested there until it was time for dinner. Then I went down to the lounge and ordered a drink. I had barely raised the glass to my lips when an all too familiar voice greeted me. I had not escaped from my tiresome neighbour after all! He grasped me warmly by the hand and insisted that we should share a table in the dining-room. "This is a pleasant surprise," he said. "I never expected to see you again after all three years."

2) Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Most of the people who appear most often and most gloriously in the history books are great conquerors and generals, whereas the people who really helped civilisation forward are often never mentioned at all. We do not know who first set a broken leg or calculated the length of the year; but we know all about the killers and destroyers. People think a great deal of them so much that on all the highest pillars in the great cities of the world you will find the figure of a conqueror. I think most people believe that the greatest countries are those that have been beaten in battle the greatest number of other countries and ruled over them as conquerors. But they are not the most civilized. Animals fight; and savages also fight; hence to be good at fighting is to be good in the way in which an animal or a savage is good, but it is not to be civilized. Nations and countries should behave properly to each other; in a civilized way.

Suppose that we reckon the whole past of living creatures on the earth as one hundred year; then the whole past of man works out about one month. Through this we take man's civilized past at about seven or eight hours. We may estimate his future. Thus mankind is only at the beginning of its civilized life, and I do not expect much as the past of man has been a beastly business; fighting, bullying and hurting.

Aren't festivals a lot of fun? All around the world there are religious festivals, harvest festivals, street festivals and fun festivals. The list goes on. Why did people even start celebrating festivals in the first place? Well, people just needed a reason to celebrate and festivals are a great way to do that. People getting together and enjoying really brings harmony and peace. If we collect all the festivals around the world that people celebrate then we would have a festival for each day around the year.

Carnival (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil) is the world's largest party which lasts for four days. Every year in February the festivities start. It started for the first time in 1823. Hundreds of people are out on the streets enjoying the street bands, singers and orchestras. The main highlight of the carnival is a Samba Parade in which 200 schools participate. It is an amazing experience, and you really have to be there once to understand that.

The festival of colours in India is loved by kids and adults the same. In fact, it provides an opportunity for adults to act like kids even if it is for a day. Hindus in India celebrate this day as a day where good wins over evil. People visit other people at their homes and drench each other in colours. Adults run around painted in colour trying to colour their friends. What fun!

Lantern Festival in Taiwan is a part of New Year's celebration. The celebrations end after this festival. It started during the Han dynasty. During the night, the people go out with the paper lanterns. Every New Year, people try to let go of the evil and welcome good. They decorate their homes with lanterns. A lot of different kinds of lanterns are available. Some are highly ornate while some are in shapes of animals. Imagine the night sky decorated with beautiful lanterns. Simply divine!

Haven't you heard about Japan's most famous dog? In front of the enormous Shibuya train station in Tokyo, there is a life-size bronze statue of a dog. Even though the statue is very small when compared to the huge neon signs flashing, it isn't difficult to find. It has been used as a meeting point since 1934 and today you will find hundreds of people waiting there for their friends to arrive-just look for the crowds.

Hachiko, an Akita dog, was born in 1923 and brought to Tokyo in 1924. His owner, Professor Eisaburo Uyeno and he were inseparable friends right from the start. Each day Hachiko would accompany his owner, a professor at the Imperial University, to Shibuya train station when he left for work. When he came back, the professor would always find the dog patiently waiting for him. Sadly, the professor died suddenly at work in 1925 before he could return home.

Although Hachiko was still a young dog, the bond between him and his owner was very strong and he continued to wait at the station every day. Sometimes, he would stay there for days at a time, though some believe that he kept returning because of the food he was given by street vendors. He became a familiar sight to commuters over time. In 1934, a statue of him was put outside the station. In 1935, Hachiko died at the place he last saw his friend alive. The dog was a sign of loyalty and friendship which can't be easily found among most of humans.
